Dennis draws his expertise from his 30 years of experience in professional psychology, training, and corporate consulting. He specializes in business psychology, leadership development, interpersonal effectiveness, communication, conflict resolution and organizational change. Dennis believes great coaching is a powerful blend of art and science. Through coaching principles and innovative creativity, he helps clients reach personal and organizational goals to become the best version of themselves.

Dennis' career began as a private practice psychotherapist. After 14 years of enjoying a thriving practice, business leaders began asking for his assistance building strategic and cohesive teams, mediating disputes, teaching emotional intelligence, assessing candidates, and developing industry leaders. He has been influencing full time via coaching and consulting throughout the US and globally since 1999.

Dennis coaches to inspire world-changers. Convinced that our universal human purpose on earth is to become fully mature human beings, Dennis challenges leaders to deliberately and positively influence their relational sphere. By growing in professional competence, personal character, and interpersonal care, leaders gain the professional credibility to impact the world for good, and the bi-product of this journey is personal purpose and satisfaction.
